

Voice of Opinion

By James Thrasher

Most post-mortem discussions of the Republican primary in Oregon have naturally dealt with the rise in Governor Dewey's political popularity. His victory cooled down Mr. Stassen, who had been red hot in previous tests. As a result, quite a number of Republicans could be observed changing bandwagons in midstream.

But what made Mr. Dewey win, anyway? Was it the New Look that several observers commented on—a genial folksy manner in contrast to the formality and comparative aloofness of the 1944 GOP presidential candidate?

Was it the fact that he took the time, as he did not do in Wisconsin to challenge Mr. Stassen mile for mile and speech for speech? Or was it his performance in the debate with Mr. Stassen on outlawing communism?

Maybe all these factors figured in the results. But certainly the outcome cannot be explained by the Dewey-Stassen debate. And perhaps the relationship has a significance that some Republican politicians, particularly some members of Congress, could ponder with profit.

The debaters were in general agreement on the nature and danger of communism, as they are on most fundamental issues. They differed in the method of coping with the danger. Governor Dewey held that existing laws were all that were necessary, and that the Communist influence in his state—where about a quarter of the party members live—was never lower than now.

Mr. Stassen contended that the party was not a party, but a clique of foreign agents. He said it could and should be outlawed by enactment of the Mundt-Nixon Bill. Mr. Dewey insisted, however, that this was not the law's intent.

But the crux of the argument seems to have been that Mr. Stassen holds that outlawing communism is constitutional as well as necessary, while Mr. Dewey disagrees.

I have no objection to the strengthening of (existing) law," he said. "But let us remember for all time to come in these United States, we should prosecute men for the crimes they commit but never for the ideas that they have."

If this intelligent, high-minded, constructive debate, which climaxed the presidential aspirants' Oregon campaign, was a major influence in the election result, then the majority of Oregon Republicans must agree with Governor Dewey. And of the two viewpoints they seem to have picked the more liberal—in the classic definition of that much-abused word.

There is nothing about Oregon Republicans to get them apart from Republican voters in other states outside the Solid South. So from this example it would seem that the trend of Republican thought on the subject of communism is more concerned with guarding individual freedom and less influenced by fear and vengefulness than the thinking of some Republicans in Congress.

Recently a Republican congressman teed off on the head of the Ohio of the Co-operation League because his daughter works for Tass, the Soviet news agency. This official, John C. Virden, is a successful businessman. The Secretary of Commerce says he is a valuable public servant and a loyal American. Mr. Virden has broken completely with his daughter on the matter of communism. Yet this congressman holds that the daughter's political belief disqualifies the father.

Not long ago another Republican congressman wanted a State Department official (Republican) fired because his second cousin was suspected of being a Communist. We don't think that such actions are in key with the thinking of most Americans—including Republicans—today.

Judge Satisfied With Old 'Honey' Treatment

Van Nuys, Calif., June 10—(AP)—A woman driver gave a judge the honey treatment today—and it worked.

Adelle Lyman Conaway, 66, a pianist, appeared before Judge David Coleman.

"I went through the red light all right," she said. "But I can't afford a fine. Will this honey do?"

The judge accepted 10 pounds of orange honey, turned it over to Van Nuys jail, suspended a $5 fine and commented:

"For the record, this court is not establishing a barter system, but your record as a driver has been excellent."

Residents East of City Want to Be Annexed

A petition was filed in Hempstead county court earlier this week asking that a large area east of the city be annexed to Hope. This is the second annexation petition now pending and possibly two more are in the process of filing.

This area comprises almost 1000 acres and lies from Hope City limits to the overpass on Highway 67, runs northward to Missouri Pacific railway, and runs south and east almost to Pines Swimming Pool. It is estimated that approval would bring about 400 residents inside the city limits.

Another petition pending would take in a large area, estimated at about square mile, north and east of Hope. It contains the Hempstead Heights addition, Hope Brick Works, and an area in the Hopewell school section. It is estimated that at least 250 persons live in the area.

Earlier this year about 150 residents living south of Hope along Highway 29 joined the city by the petition route. Another project is in the process along Highway 29, north of Hope and along Highway 67, west of the city. Both proposals are being considered.

The petition filed this week contains signatures from a majority of property owners in the area. The court will hold a hearing on the issue on Monday, July 19. If it is approved the matter then comes before Hope City Council for approval, which will make it a part of Hope.

Moscow Enters Complaint Against U. S.

London, June 10—(AP)—Russia has complained to the American government and the United Nations that "unbridled propaganda for a new war is being carried on in the United States," Moscow radio said today.

An official note protesting that the United States is violating a United Nations resolution condemning "unbridled propaganda for a new war" was handed to American officials in Washington yesterday, the broadcast said, with a copy of Tryvile Lie, secretary-general of the United Nations.

A similar complaint was voiced also by the Western bloc. The broadcast quoted the Russian note as saying:

"Despite the resolution of the second session of the United Nations general assembly on 'measures to be adopted against war propaganda and armaments,' the United States is continuing to carry on a new war by means of the United Nations, unbridled propaganda for a new war is being carried on in the United States."

There was no immediate official comment in Washington.

The specific Russian complaint was against an article in newsweek magazine, "The Soviet Union and the American People," which contained slanders and inventions directed against the Soviet Union and depicting the Soviet Union as an aggressor allegedly preparing to attack the United States.

The article also expounds a plan for utilization of the American air forces, air bases and atom bombs against the Soviet Union, in particular for the destruction of such Soviet towns as Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Kharkov and Odessa," the broadcast version of the note said.

The complaints accused newsweek and the Dutch labor party organ "Het Vrije Volk" of "slandering the Soviet Union, and planning against the security of other countries and discussing military actions against the Russians."

Maj. Gen. A. P. Kisenko, acting Soviet member of the allied commission for the investigation of "insolent slanders" about Russia had appeared in publications there. He cited an article "white war versus red" in the May 17 Pacific edition of newsweek.

Newsweek said then the article "simply reported the military thinking at the time in both Washington and Moscow."

"The whole article," newsweek said, "was written around the fact that, in any nation, the military must always be prepared for any contingency."

One Reason Housing Costs So Much

If you're stumped by the sky-high prices of homes today, this chart may give you a partial answer. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the cost of all building materials jumped 107 per cent between Aug., 1939, and Oct., 1947, the latest figures available. Percentage rises for individual items are shown on the chart.

Institute Seeking Mineral Samples Which Could Be Profitable to Local Residents

If you have some unusual looking soil, sand, or practically any kind of formation of rock, etc. about your home there is a possibility you may be letting cash remain idle.

Through efforts of the Arkansas Power and Light Company the Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, a non-profit and tax-free organization, has a crew of specialized workers touring every county in Arkansas searching for anything that might be put to use.

All you have to do is bring a sample to the Hope Chamber of Commerce office, a free of charge description. The sample will be turned over to the research specialists, analyzed and the owner will be notified to complete findings.

Work of the Midwest Research Institute is of confined solely to mineral research. They are stressing minerals because less is done in that field by the government. However, the organization will help you iron out your troubles in agriculture, timber or industry. The purpose of this work is to industrialize mid-America which includes Arkansas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska.

When its work is completed the Institute will have a detailed survey of the natural resources of Arkansas. All 75 counties are included in the project which is financed solely by the Arkansas Power and Light Co. at actual cost.

Regardless of what you have in agricultural, dairy, timber or mineral fields give the Institute a chance to tell you whether it is valuable.

Graduates Should Give Their Diplomas to Mom, Pop—They Earned It the Hard Way

By HAL BOYLE
New York—(AP)—Joe and Jane, New York graduates of the month from the ivory tower forever, feel like Eliza with the bloodhounds baying near and no cake of ice to leap to.

It's quite a strain to jump from Alma Mammy's collier to life's cluster.

Their commencement address too often is delivered by a weary fossil, exhumed and rented for the occasion in a rented cap and gown, who whips five-act platitudes at their troubled heads like a tired fango bawler.

Why? Here's one man's idea of how to welcome these campus fugitives in an honest way to the busy world we dwell in:

"Dear members of the 1948 gadabout class:

"Shake that ivy out of your hair! As soon as prey gives you your diploma, hand it over to papa and mama. They earned it—the hard way."

"Now you have to start earning. And that means you've got to start using elbow grease for fuel instead of the midnight oil."

"You've reached the time when they separate the men and women from the boys and girls. Face it. It's fun."

"And I know how you feel—proud a little, scared a lot, asking yourself what comes next? Don't let it get you down. Every man who got out of a penitentiary felt that way—a little afraid of the open places, and wondering if there was a place for him."

"Is there a place for you? Let's take up Jane College first. Joe, and then we'll deal with you."

Labor Secretary Schwellenbach Dies Today

Washington, June 10—(AP)—Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach, 53, a former senator and federal judge, died today after a long illness.

President Truman, a close friend and former Senate colleague, was notified immediately. The president is in Schwellenbach's home state of Washington on a speaking tour.

Mr. Truman received the news at Olympia "with the deepest regret," he termed Schwellenbach "a warm personal friend x x x a great senator, a great judge and a great secretary of labor."

The White House said Schwellenbach died at 4:40 a. m. at Walter Reed hospital where he had been a patient since May 28.

Mrs. Schwellenbach was at his bedside.

His illness was a cardiac failure which complicated his recent illness. Funeral plans are incomplete.

There was no immediate indication who Mr. Truman might pick for the vacant post.

David A. Morse is undersecretary and has been serving as acting secretary during Schwellenbach's illness.

Schwellenbach took over the Labor Department three years ago after Frances Perkins, one of the original members of President Roosevelt's cabinet, stepped out.

Schwellenbach's death came in the midst of widespread labor troubles. But of late he had been in bed settling labor-management disputes. Congress had whittled away the department's powers and shifted them to other agencies.

His illness began with a far-seeing one of the management crisis which greeted his first year in office.

Tired and worn after long hours of conferences during the marriage of 1946, Schwellenbach decided to take a hot shower before retiring near daybreak. He slipped and fell, cracking a vertebrae. For weeks he lay in a hospital bed and for months after that he had to wear a back brace.

The secretary spent less and less time in the harrowing labor post. What energy he could rally, was mainly directed at holding his department together in the face of appropriation cuts in Congress.

Spokane Paper Acknowledges Distinction

Spokane, Wash., June 10—(AP)—The Spokane Review today in an editorial today that it "must acknowledge the distinction accorded it" by President Truman, who yesterday called the Chicago Tribune and the Spokane Review "the worst in the United States."

Describing the president's visit to Spokane as the pleasant interlude and a compliment to the city," the paper added:

"He described this newspaper as one of the two 'worst' in the nation and credited them with responsibility for the election of the present Congress. The Spokane Review can only dismiss the first charge as having been made in a moment of heated partisanship and interpret the second one as a tribute to the newspaper's influence abroad, we fear, at least in part undeserved."

"The personal visit of the president, both in his role as chief executive and as a political candidate, was appreciated by Spokane. The Welcome mat was out this time, just as it will be the next."

The paper carried a banner story on the front page under the headline "Truman Blames Two Newspapers for 'Worst U. S. Congress'."

The lead story carried the byline of Rhea Felkner, reporter who was questioning the president when the "worst paper" charges were made.

Experiment Station Study Days Set June 25-26; 483 4-H Members Here Today

Three 4-H Club Study Days are in progress at the local Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station and will continue through tomorrow, according to Cecil M. Bick, Station Superintendent. Eight counties with a total of 408 4-H Club boys and girls were at the Experiment Station yesterday.

Today there were seven counties—Garland, Lafayette, Miller, high county with 228, Montgomery, Nevada, Scott and Hornsby with 483 4-H boys and girls taking part in a full day's program designed to give the young people the latest information in research being carried on at this station. Many various topics were discussed by technical leaders from the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture and Extension Service. The program was based on the fact that the foundation of our future welfare is manifest in our young people, and it is they who will be carrying the community life and activities of our state and nation within a very short time. What is done now to enlighten young people will have a tremendous effect in making towns and communities better places in which to live.

As a follow-up on the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission's program of wildlife restoration, there was on display native deer and fish. This was a treat for many who have never seen wild deer, especially fawns which still have their spots. The display of bass and brim attracted much attention and gave the boys and girls a much better idea of the kind of fish they have when they pull them out of our creeks and lakes. D. W. Parker, Asst. Secretary of the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission, with the aid of Lester Wade of Blevins and Earl Barham, local Game Warden, again today brought before the group a discussion on the care of our wild life.

In the afternoon Charles Arrington, Secretary of the Hope Chamber of Commerce, delivered an interesting and humorous story to the visitors.

D. S. Lantip, State 4-H Club Agent, directed a talent program to the boys and girls.

Tomorrow the Experiment Station is expecting 625 4-H Club boys and girls.

The Fruit and Truck Branch Experiment Station of the University of Arkansas will hold its main study day for farm people in southwest Arkansas on Friday, June 25. Cecil Bick, station superintendent, has announced. The annual negro study day is scheduled for Saturday, June 26.

The Fruit and Truck Station is located in Hempstead county, two miles north of Hope on U. S. Highway 67. At the two all-day study days visitors will hear about varieties and practices which have proved profitable on the station. Its conditions are typical of those in the Coastal Plains section of southern Arkansas.

Scheduled for discussion and demonstration are experiments with peaches, control of fruit diseases, production of vegetables, and the management of a farm woodlot.

Taking part on the program will be members of the staff of the University of Arkansas College of Agriculture at Fayetteville and of the branch Station, Extension Service personnel in southwest Arkansas are assisting with arrangements.

Dixiecrats Seek Aid in Midwest

Jackson, Miss., June 10—(AP)—State's Rights Democrats, campaigning for a South solidly against President Truman and his civil rights program, are looking to the Midwest for added support.

As the organization opened campaign headquarters here, Nebraska's Democratic Chairman William L. Harbo, announced at Omaha yesterday that he had accepted an invitation to attend a States' Rights caucus.

The caucus will be held July 11 in either Philadelphia or Washington to establish a common course of action for States' Rights. The campaign committee says the caucus will also formulate demands to be made upon the National Democratic Convention and decide if the party will walk out if they are refused.

At campaign headquarters here Director Oliver Emmerich, a McComb, Miss., publisher, said preliminary work will point toward a conference at Birmingham, Ala., to be called by the national party.

The campaign committee said Tuesday that the conference will suggest a presidential and vice-presidential candidate to states in its own right, and recommend that those states support those candidates.

As the plan for a showdown with the national party progressed, Gov. Frank P. Bland, founder of the States' Rights leaders would not be satisfied even if President Truman should back down on his civil rights program.

"We plan to ask for a positive stand by the national party for States' Rights and nothing less than that will be satisfactory," he said.

"The civil rights issue is incidental. We want a positive declaration placed in the party platform that will insure the rights of the states as provided by the constitution."

Visit to Arkansas Helps French to Understand U. S.

Washington, June 10—(AP)—A visit in Arkansas gave two French students a different, better opinion of the United States.

Louis Merimond of Lyons and Philippe Meyer of Paris spent seven weeks in the southern states as guests of the Little Rock Rotary Club.

Stopping in Washington on their return home to get a glimpse of how the federal government works, the two 21-year-olds said their visit had dispelled previous beliefs that:

"This was a country 'without intellectual or spiritual culture.'"

Most inhabitants of the United States stemmed from England. They were surprised with the number of persons with French ancestry.

The two said they were amazed at the efficiency of the country's educational system.

They told a reporter he hopes other French students can visit this country.

"To those you over Russia, western Europe must understand America," he said.

The young Frenchmen were guests of Senator Fulbright and Rep. Hays at luncheon yesterday and watched both branches of Congress in action.

Battlefields in Palestine Get Cease Fire Order

By MAX BOYD

Cairo, June 10—(AP)—Cease fire orders are going out today to Arab and Jewish troops in the field. They are being told to stop shooting tomorrow morning for four weeks, during which efforts will be made to settle the month-old Palestine war peacefully.

Premier Tewfik Abu Alhuda announced in Amman Trans-Jordan, last night, that Trans-Jordan forces in Palestine already have been ordered to cease fire at the appointed deadline—1 a. m. (EST) Friday. This would include the Arab legion, one of the "Arabs' main striking forces."

In Tel Aviv Israel's foreign minister Moshe Shertok, said in announcing his government's acceptance of the United Nations' engineered truce, that "Israel was ready to issue a cease fire to Jewish troops."

Count Folke Bernadotte, United Nations mediator, who announced the cease fire, told both the Arabs and Jews last night he hoped they would not let the truce become a mere truce in the Palestine battlefield of the day and hour of the cease fire in order to avoid misunderstandings.

Bernadotte said he would call a peace conference as soon as possible at the neutral Mediterranean island of Rhodes.

"We have achieved only the first step," Bernadotte told newsmen. "I assure you we are going to work for the same energy for the big result we hope to get—peace in Palestine."

Shertok declared that Israel's acceptance of the truce "is not matter of military necessity to us." "To the contrary," he added, "recent claims of Arab victories in Palestine have been based on proverbial Arab imagination and incurable British wishful thinking."

U. N. Secretary-General Tryvile Lie said at Lake Success that Bernadotte was asking six coastal vessels and 63 military officers to supervise compliance with the cease fire terms. Under present plans Lie said, United States, France and Belgium "supply the ships and military observers."

Air Officials Doubt Story of Indian

Montgomery, Ala., June 10—(AP)—An Indian soldier's story that he parachuted from a transport plane while trying to go home for a visit with his new-born son is doubted by air force officials.

Pvt. Lee Orange of Gunter Field, Ala., said at the Army-Navy home at Hot Springs, Ark., where he was detained, that he had jumped from a C-47 over West Tennessee Sunday after learning the plane was headed north instead of west.

He said he had gone AWOL from his base to see his wife and son at Carnegie, Okla.

After falling out of the plane, he related, he hitchhiked to North Little Rock, Ark. where he was taken into custody and sent to Hot Springs.

Maj. Harry Connelly, public relations officer at the air university, said Orange's story was unlikely. He said no C-47 left Gunter Field Sunday afternoon headed for Arkansas, Oklahoma or Tennessee.

Connelly also reported pilots say it is nearly impossible to jump from a C-47 without jetting down the door. Had that been done, he added, a report would have been made after the plane landed.

The plane further said Orange had been given a drink and $40 advance in pay about two weeks ago so that he might go to see his baby. Orange spent the money and was returned to Gunter Field by military police.

Connelly reported Orange's commanding officer would go to Hot Springs for the soldier today.

Downtown Tower for Auto Phones

Citizens of Hope have been stretching their necks the past two days and wondering about a tower being erected in the downtown area.

The tower is being erected by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. directly behind their office on Second Street. It is the key cog in the car radio telephone service which the company announced several weeks ago. When finished the tower will be 135 feet high.

When completed a motorist can pick up a telephone in his automobile and call anywhere while driving along the highway.

Clark County Father of Six Faces Charge

Arkadelphia, June 10—(AP)—Dorsey Cox, 38-year-old father of six children, has been charged with murder in the death of Hotel Operator Oscar Wheeler at Amity Monday night.

Preliminary hearing is scheduled in municipal court here next Monday.

Sheriff W. T. Matlock said Cox, who is in jail here, admitted shooting Wheeler on an Amity street.

Senator Sees No Need for Draft Law

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Senator Revercomb (R-W.Va.) contended in the Senate today that there is no need to revive the draft law that the army can get all the volunteers it wants if it tries hard enough.

Revercomb spoke as the hours ran out on a Senate agreement to begin voting on amendments and the bill at 3 p. m. (EST). He told his colleagues that the navy and air force don't want Selective Service for youths from 19 through 25, as the measure provides; that only the army wants it.

"The evidence convinces the army of being against the voluntary system," the West Virginia senator shouted.

"If the army will do its full part toward the filling of its ranks through the voluntary system, it will be done. The navy has done it, the air force has done it. The army comes and asks for the draft."

Revercomb charged that the army had raised its intelligence test requirements to cut off volunteers.

He said the war was fought with men accepted if they made a grade of 50 or more on the test. He said the army had raised the passing grade to 70 and then had tipped it to 80.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders forecast that the military manpower bill would be approved. Then it moves over to the House for another battle.

"That one won't be as drawn out as it comes. But it still remains to be seen whether the powerful rules committee will let the bill reach the House floor."

The Senate's agreement to vote—coupled with a limit on debate—came after three consecutive day-and-night sessions. Clocks in the chamber had passed the midnight hour after 13 1/2 hours of angry debate.

As the climatic balloting neared, these were the major features of the bitterly fought measure to revive Selective Service.

1. All men from 18 through 25 would have to register, with those 19 through 25 subject to two years' service in the regular army, air force, navy or the coast guard.

2. Up to 180,000 18-year-olds could volunteer for one year of training and thus escape the chance of being drafted at 19 for two years.

3. Both the regular and armed services and their reserves would be expanded, with the draft used to fill up any gaps left by lack of volunteers, or re-enlistments.

4. The wartime Selective Service organization with its local draft boards would be revived for two years on a reduced scale.

Although several amendments remained to be voted upon, only one major change appeared possible.

Senator Morse (R-Ore.) wants to cut the term of draftees' service from 24 to 18 months. The Senate beat this down by a voice vote last night before Morse realized what happened.

At his protest, the lawmakers agreed to give him a rollcall vote today on the question of reconsideration. If that passes, Morse could ask for a recorded tally of the 18 month proposal.

There were the usual last minute demands before all parties allowed the unanimous-consent motion to slide through.

Senator Russell (D-Ga.), quarter-back for the Dixie Democrats on the Senate floor, was promised that no last minute attempt would be made to slip through any "civil rights riders."

Goldsborough Continues Rail Strike Ban

Washington, June 10 (AP)—Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough today continued his ban against a strike by three railroad unions.

After a hearing in federal court, Goldsborough granted the government a temporary injunction. It replaced a restraining order which blocked a strike after government seizure of the railroads.

At the same time Goldsborough gave the unions five days to file a written answer to the Justice Department's pleading for a permanent injunction. He said he would set another hearing on the case after the answer is filed.

This action leaves the railroad case still uncertain pending the final hearing.

But Goldsborough's action today continues the legal ban against a coast-to-coast railroad strike which otherwise would have expired tomorrow night.

The judge heard arguments today by a lawyer for the engineers, firemen, and switchmen in favor of the union motion to dismiss the restraining order.

Assistant Attorney General Graham Morrison opposed the motion and asked for an injunction. Morrison said that "presumably their intent to strike would be carried out the very moment your honor's injunctive bar was lifted."

"The court thinks that under the record as it now stands, he must refuse the union motion and grant the preliminary injunction."

He said, however, that the defendants are entitled to a "speedy final hearing," which "may change the picture."

Nursery Gifts Pour Into Royal Palace

BY RUSSELL LANDSTROM

London—Whether Princess Elizabeth expects a baby is anybody's guess—nervously even her friends—but rumors are good enough for many of the devoted who already have started a shower of nursery gifts.

Disregarding Buckingham Palace's skeptical—and unofficial—comments on recurring reports that the princess is pregnant, people here and in the dominions have sent in presents of baby clothes, quilts and blankets for crib and pram, and toys.

Persons close to the court say "Elizabeth clubs" are being formed in Australia, New Zealand and Canada to pool contributions. A similar scheme may get under way in Britain—if there is any hint from the royal family that the reports are true.

Practical wives and mothers in several parts of the empire have written that from the moment they first heard the gossip they set to work with their knitting needles and resolved that the princess should not run short of woollies.

One London woman made up her mind to use some of her precious clothing coupons to buy woolen yard for the "princess' baby things."

"Mind you, it's not settled yet," she said. "Some say she's going to have a baby, and some say she's not. It doesn't make a lot of difference. She'll be having one someday, and these nice warm things will come in handy then."

All this, of course, the palace points out, is decidedly premature. The princess is booked up for public engagements until the end of June. That is cited responsibly as a reason for doubting rumors that she is expecting a child in October. Yes, the later dates could be canceled, but not without a good deal of bother. Why should they have been made in the first place? So ask informed members of the court.

But in the end they all come to this: "We simply don't know. So far as we know Princess Elizabeth has spoken to none of her intimates on the subject."

Asked what might happen to the baby gifts should they not be needed, court sources said "they might be returned, passed along to deserving young mothers in this country or turned over to a welfare organization."

And if they should be needed? Then a little staff would be set up to receive catalog and acknowledge the presents—much the same as was done before the royal wedding. The princess would select what she wished to keep, and give away the rest "knowing the donors and the public would appreciate her motive."

Youngsters Can Groom Own Hair

BY BETTY CLARKE

AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor—If you want to teach your little girl good grooming habits, make it easy for her. When brushing her hair she should know the correct technique, own a pretty brush and get a reward that will encourage her to continue her grooming practices.

Teach her to use the brush correctly by letting her brush her hair when you do yours. Set up a scoring system for her. At first she will brush her hair and fire easily. But as her performance improves you can mark her progress either by the gold star method or special treats.

A simple and effective brush routine is one that starts at the nape of the neck and encircles the head, brushing a layer of hair at a time. Every stroke should be upward and outward, to raise the hair so that the bristles can cleanse and massage the scalp. The brush should be placed on its side and against the scalp at the neckline and turned with a twist of the wrist so that all the bristles roll on the scalp.

Explain to your youngster that the bristles should touch the scalp so as to loosen dry skin particles and stimulate surface circulation. She should brush to the very tips of her hair to remove dust, dry skin particles and excess oil.

A good brush will give daughter the best cooperation. You can choose a sparkling jewel colored one, but make sure it has long resilient bristles. These should be set at least half way around the head to give double-brushing with every stroke.

You might go so far as to show her how to put her hair up in rag curlers. This can be made more attractive for her, and the performance seem less of a chore, if you supply her with some colorful rag curlers. Save bright red, green blue and yellow strips of material which can be used for this purpose.

You will notice that as daughter becomes more conscious of her hair, she will also become interested in how she wears it. The simple hairdo is always best for a little girl. If she wears pigtales, however, during the winter months, find a becoming arrangement that will be cooler for summer. You can do this by cutting her hair a little shorter so that the braids fall just a bit below her shoulders. Or you may wind them around her head and fasten them with a bow on top.

It may be troublesome at first to good with daughter's attempts to arrange her own hair. But when she has learned, mother can rest on her laurels.

President Truman was notified by telephone early today of the death of Secretary of Labor Schwelienbach whom he regarded as one of his closest friends.

It was 4:33 a. m. Olympia time when the news of the death of the president had received word from the Walter Reed hospital in Washington of Schwelienbach's passing.

He had learned with deepest grief of the death of Lewis Schwelienbach, he said in a statement read to reporters by one of his staff.

"He was my warm personal friend. He was a great senator, a great judge and a great secretary of labor."

The president served in the Senate with Schwelienbach when the latter represented Washington, the state in which Mr. Truman is being

Myron Taylor Involved in Paternity Suit

Chicago, June 10 (AP)—Myron C. Taylor, presidential envoy to the Vatican, and a friend were sued for $2,000,000 today by a Chicago woman who alleges she is Taylor's illegitimate daughter.

Named defendant with Taylor, former chairman of U. S. Steel Corporation, is Joseph A. Bennett. The federal court suit described him as a "friend and counselor" of Taylor.

The suit was brought by Mrs. Eunice Waltermann, 35, wife of a factory worker. She said she sued merely "for the sake of my children"—13-year-old twin boys.

She alleges that Taylor and Bennett connived to conceal that she is Taylor's illegitimate daughter and hindered her efforts to establish her parentage.

Her husband, Earl, who she married in Chicago, in 1934, is an excelsior for the link belt manufacturing company. The twins are named Kenneth and Earl, Jr.

Mrs. Waltermann said she discovered her parentage through an investigation started after she appealed to the late Mayor Fiorelo LaGuardia of New York. She said she found she was born in Lebanon hospital, Bronx, N. Y., on June 22, 1912. Her mother was listed as Margaret Nichols, 19, and her father, as Myron Taylor, 23, a clerk. Mrs. Waltermann said in an interview that her mother and Taylor met while she was a cashier in the Lincoln theater on 135th street in New York.

She added that she sued in December, 1946, in the federal court of New York and lost the suit. Her present suit asks that she be declared Taylor's daughter with full right.

Royal Wedding Takes Place in Athens

By L. S. CHAKALES

Athens, June 10.—(AP)—Handsome Mihal, 24, of Romania took Princess Anne of Denmark to his bride today in a glittering ceremony before a small gathering of royalty. They used crowns borrowed from the Greek royal house.

Garbed in the vestments of the highest churchman of Greece, Archbishop Damaskinos pronounced in the Greek language the solemn ritual of the orthodox church to unite the abdicated head of Romania's royal family to the House of Denmark.

Annie is a Roman Catholic and failed to win special dispensation from Rome for her marriage to Mihal in the Greek rite. Mihal insisted upon the Greek ceremony and upon bringing up his children in that faith, to protect his claim to the throne he says he was forced to abdicate.

The ceremony went off with precision. Attractive, 24-year-old Annie wore a bright white satin gown and a huge diamond necklace. She had orange blossoms in her veil and the dress was trimmed in old lace. Her long train was carried by three youngsters, crown Prince Constantine of Greece, Prince Karl of Hesse and the Duke of Aosta.

Only about 30 persons were in the grand hall of the royal palace as Annie entered on the arm of her uncle, Prince Eric of Denmark. She took her position on the left of her tall, 26-year-old groom, who wore the uniform of a Romanian army marshal.

The wedding guest—King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece, Queen Mother Helen and other members of royal families, grouped themselves about a blue-velvet covered table decorated in silver, placed before a dark walnut chapel which was especially installed for the ceremony.

Prince Eric and King Paul took the positions of sponsor of the bride and best man, and members of the royal families ranged themselves in rows behind the two.

The archbishop, former regent of Greece, spoke the last words of the ceremony, "Isaiah foretold, which mean 'with the help of God, dance.' In accordance with the ancient rite, Mihal and Annie made three turns around the table. While they 'danced' thus, they were showered with rice and rose petals. The royal pair's crowns were connected by a ribbon symbolizing their union.

Within 15 minutes after the ceremony ended, the entire wedding party went into the courtyard of the palace. There they were met by scores of correspondents and photographers, none of whom had been permitted to witness the marriage.

The smiling couple proceeded to the central hall of the palace, to receive formal congratulations of King Paul and Queen Frederika and other members of royal families. A luncheon for the guests followed, and then Annie and Mihal arranged to leave for Taiati, the Greek summer palace 17 miles north of Athens.

Annie and Mihal are expected to honeymoon at Taiati until next Wednesday, and then leave for Switzerland.

A source close to the palace said Mihal and Annie received a telegram of good wishes from Anne's parents in Denmark. There had been reports that Anne had failed to win parental approval for the match.

Annie and Mihal first met at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip in London last November. The princess once worked for two months at the Lord and Taylor department store in New York, and her mother was employed by an exclusive millinery shop there during part of her stay in America.

New British Ambassador to U. S. Has Tough Job Ahead Keeping America Friendly

By RELMAN MORIN

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst (For DeWitt MacKenzie)

Scholarly Sir Oliver Franks, is hardly a man to be envied.

He takes up his duties in Washington at a time when the relations between Britain and this country are at a very low point. Indeed, the over-all community of interest remains. So does much of the mutual admiration and genuine friendship between the two people that was engendered by close contact during the war.

But the British already are irritated, bitterly with our Palestine "policy." That is a fact. It exists now.

In the near future, American administrators are likely to be as irritated with the British over events that develop from the actual operations of the Marshall Plan.

So the new British envoy has one big, tough, hairy-headed problem on his desk today. And he probably will have an even bigger and tougher one confronting him tomorrow.

Let's examine them. The first is easy to understand. Britain has been in the Middle East for well over a century. At the apex of her strength, she was the "great force in the Arab world. She maintained peace and order, sometimes at the expenditure of blood and treasure. She entered into treaty relationships with the Arab countries, and even with the smaller tribes.

Along with very considerable business and economic interests, she acquired great prestige. The British "resident" of Egypt, though he might have no more than the rank of a major — was a man of singular importance. The Arab ruler hardly made a move without consulting him.

It was natural and logical, therefore, for the Arabs to look to Britain for assistance, political and otherwise, in the battle over Palestine.

Britain was opposed to partitioning the country. How she would have solved the problem, had hers been the deciding voice at Lake Success, is a question. Whatever the answer, the United States led the move.

Last November Partition became a fact. Immediately, blood began to flow. Something very much resembling a 180-degree turn in the American attitude then appeared. A Jewish state was proclaimed. Six months later, we recognized it, formally, as a state.

There is no turning back from that now. It was quite possible to abandon the partitioning plan. But since we took this formal diplomatic step of recognizing Israel, Israel exists. It cannot be abandoned.

Britain ultimately must recognize the new state too. When she does, her position vis-a-vis the Arab world may become practically impossible. The Arabs certainly will turn elsewhere, to some other major power, for help.

You will not need three guesses, or even two, to name that power. That's the basis for British irritation with the United States.

Americans, in turn, are beginning to feel excessively annoyed over British economic operations. As Marshall Plan money goes across the sea, that annoyance may develop into real friction.

For the thing, there is the "sterling bloc." It will British and American administrators to produce between an "earned" dollar and a "free" dollar? The British are going to acquire dollars both by the sale of exported products, and through Marshall plan loans.

Americans will demand some degree of supervision in the use of the latter.

Criticism already exists, in Washington, over the matter of trade between Western Europe and those countries within the Russian orbit.

Britain recently sold Russia steel railway tracks in exchange for coarse grains for cattle fodder. Britain needs lumber, and she can get it more cheaply from Poland and Russia than anywhere else.

The American position is that nothing should go to Russia or her satellites, that is potentially war material useful to the Soviet war machine. Steel rails make railroads, and railroads move troops and tanks.

So the question of East-West trade borders with spikes. Americans, but Britain cannot certainly will not make these transactions, because she needs the commodities of Eastern Europe.

Indian Tells Story of Chute Jump

Montgomery, Ala., June 9.—(U.I.)—Oh Spotted Elk, the Great White Father is displeased with you.

Pvt. Lee Orange, who says he's a full blood Cheyenne Indian and called Spotted Elk by his tribesmen told Arkansas newsmen that he bailed out of a C-47 transport plane Sunday, en route to Carnegie, Okla., to see his new-born son.

Orange, who said he was a corporal, told reporters that he couldn't get a furlough, so he caught a ride on the C-47 ship leaving Gunter Field here Sunday. Orange said he thought the ship was California-bound, when it headed out in the wild blue yonder.

When it wasn't, Orange said he hit the silk, in his first—and last—parachute jump. He landed a few miles east of Memphis, Tenn., and hitchhiked to North Little Rock, Ark. Police picked him up there and turned him over to the military at the Hot Springs Army and Navy hospital.

He told the provost marshal that he had been in the air corps 18 months and had had a 10-day leave at the conclusion of his basic training.

He said the child was born to his 23-year-old wife three weeks ago. The Air Force version of the saga of Private Orange differs.

Three weeks ago, said the Air Force today, Orange was given a furlough and a $40 cash advance to make the Oklahoma trek. Where he went isn't included in the official record. But he reappeared without the $40 and with a hangerover. That is in the record. The furlough was rescinded.

The AP said Orange had been at Gunter Air Force base since January. His record shows two court martial. One for drunkenness. The other for violating his restrictions in connection with the first sentence.

To further ruin a good story, officials said only one C-47 left either Gunter or Maxwell here Sunday. It went to Lawson Field, Ga., and back.

Additionally, C-47 men question that parachuting from that type of ship is a one-man job. It would take superhuman strength in flight to open the hatch. Besides, the door can't be closed to close the door back, once outside the plane.

Had the hatch been left open, by Air Corps regulations, the pilot would have reported it. Such a report has not been received.

In addition, Orange, 21, has several days been "recommended for separation as an incompetent soldier," the Air Force added.

Home Demonstration Clubs Appear on Radio Network

According to Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, a series of Home Demonstration radio programs on a state wide basis started June 5. Each week a group of Home Demonstration Club members with their Home Demonstration Agent will be heard over KARK, Little Rock, at 11:30 on Saturday morning.

AP Director Gets Honorary Degree

New York, June 9.—(AP)—Kent Cooper, executive director and general manager of the Associated Press, and Emil Schram, president of the New York Stock Exchange, were among seven recipients of honorary degrees from New York University today.

Cooper received the honorary degree of doctor of letters at the university's 116th commencement exercises in which academic degrees were conferred upon 8,000.

Schram was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws. Vice Chancellor Harold O. Voorhis, who presented Cooper the degree, cited him as "perennial champion of world-wide freedom of the press" and "originator of innumerable devices that account for the amazing efficacy of modern news distribution."

Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase said in conferring the degree upon Cooper: "It is fitting that today we should honor both your own career and the hundredth anniversary of the great organization you head."

Women from Lorraine County were featured on the program. Schedules for the remainder of June are:

June 12—Faulkner county
June 19—Hot Springs county
June 26—Jefferson county

Overloaded Circuits Use Electricity

Most families economize on electricity by being careful to turn off lights, but many do not realize that overloading circuits, using appliances unsuited to wiring, or installing in second-rate cords also causes waste. Rural electrification advisors of the U. S. Department of Agriculture explain that too few circuits and too small wires cause dim or flickering lights and slow down appliances. This means less light, heat or power for the money spent on electricity, and also greater depreciation of equipment.

The way to avoid such waste is to provide adequate circuits and large enough wires when electricity is installed in building or remodeling the home, says Lorraine Elzevood, Home Demonstration Agent. The average six-room house generally needs one to two circuits for the basement, four to six for the first floor, and two to four for the second floor. Adequate circuits should be installed to take care of present and also future equipment. It costs far less to put these in when the house is built than to install them later.

Whenever possible, long circuits should be avoided to prevent loss of electric energy. With No. 14 wire, the outlets should be not more than 25 feet from a fuse box or panel board; with No. 12 wire, not more than 35 feet. If circuits must be longer in a large house, fuse boxes or circuit breaker panels should be installed on each floor, supplied by feeder wires, preferably of No. 2 size, from the service entrance box.

The size of the wire determines the amount of current the wire will carry safely and efficiently. No. 14 wire is most commonly used for all household wiring except the entrance line, but No. 12 or 10 should be used wherever the load is especially heavy, as in the kitchen, dining room, laundry or workshop. Separate circuits of No. 12 or 10 wire are advised for the electric iron, honor or toaster. Or these appliances can be used alternately one at a time, on one circuit or No. 10 wire.

Reds Lash Out at 'Western Spy Ring'

By RICHARD KASISCHKE
Berlin, June 10.—(AP)—The official Russian military newspaper said today the Russians will not what it called a western spy center in Berlin.

The accusation and threat came soon after the Russians imposed new travel bans between their zone of Germany and the American-British zones. Both appeared to be moves in the long cold war against the western powers, in an effort to force them from this island city occupied by all four powers in the heart of the Russian zone.

The newspaper, Tagliche Rundschau asserted: "We must emphasize that no (four-power) agreement on Berlin foresaw the transformation of Berlin into an espionage and sabotage center against the Soviet occupation zone."

The comment was on a Russian charge that a German reporter, Dieter Friede, had served the Americans and British as a spy in the Russian zone. The charges were denied. The Russians announced they were holding Friede after denying for seven months they knew where he was.

The same newspaper said the six-power recommendations for a federal government in western Germany can never be implemented until recognized and can never become law. Communist newspaper took the same line, calling on Germans to resist the plan. The Tagliche Rundschau said the western powers' objective is to create a new German state and separate the Ruhr for "American exploitation."

The new travel restrictions affected interzonal travel, but did not hinder allied motor travel between Berlin and the west. American military government officials said the rules violated interzonal travel agreements. They prepared to protest.

Sand Wireworms Pest to Be Considered

Damage from sand wireworm can be prevented by a program of rotation, cover crops, and manuring, according to Oliver L. Adams, Hempstead county agent.

This pest seriously hurts corn and other row crops on sandy soils in this area. It stunts or kills young plants.

Growing a broadcast crop for one year will rid a field of wireworms, suggests the agent. A crop of corn or some other row crop can then be grown without wireworm damage. But with continuous row cropping fields soon become infested. After one or possibly two years in row crops, land should be sown to a broadcast crop for a year or two.

Cover crops and manure raise the moisture-holding capacity of the soil. This grows the wireworms. Furthermore, the increased moisture-holding capacity enables injured plants to recover more quickly.

Imitates Other Instruments

Moscow —(AP)—"Trud" reports that an experimental workshop of the Soviet Art Council in Leningrad produced a new type of accordion which will reproduce the sound of many musical instruments. Called the "timbre accordion," a recent demonstration showed the instrument reproducing the music of a French horn, the clarinet, and the bassoon. The accordion is one of the most popular instruments in Russia.

But GOP Congressmen Struck Back Swiftly and Pointedly

There are people who think Mr. Truman is the poorest president we have had since George Washington was elected. House Speaker Martin of Massachusetts added: "There are people who have said that about the president."

That's mighty big talk coming from a small boy," said Rep. Van Zandt (R-Pa.).

Rep. Hope (R-Kas), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, suggested that "the frigid reception which the president is receiving in the west seems to have driven him to a loose and irresponsible talk."

GOP senators were somewhat more restrained in their public comment.

But Senator Wherry of Nebraska, acting majority leader, accused the president of playing "ward politics."

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Senate's Republican policy committee and a candidate for his party's presidential nomination, will have a made-to-order forum for a rebuttal tomorrow night.

Taft, who has tangled with Mr. Truman before on Congress' record, is booked for an appearance on the NBC "Pro and Con" program at 9:15 p. m. (EST) 10:45 p. m. CST. The broadcast, on the subject "Shall We Go Back to the New Deal?" was planned before the president's latest outburst.

Taft noted this and said his appearance "is not intended as a reply to Mr. Truman's statement."

"But I shall probably make some reference to it," the Ohio senator added.

Congressional Democrats were silent. As a minority not in control of Congress, they avoided themselves from the president's criticism.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Truman toned down his words somewhat a couple of hours after his first blast.

Visiting the huge Grand Coulee dam later in the day, the president said that on second thought maybe the "Thaddeus Stevens" Congress of civil war reconstruction days was worse than this one.

But certainly, he went on, this Congress is the worst since he got into politics in 1920 and even the worst in his memory.

Back here the lawmakers showed no signs of tempering their remarks.

What's more it begins to appear increasingly likely that Congress will be on hand this summer for closer range word battling with the president.

Care of Soil Essential Says Agent

If badly depleted soils in Hempstead county could talk, they would say: "Give me nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, and above all, give me plenty of organic matter with which to make humus."

County Agent Oliver L. Adams says that crop soils must be porous, like a sponge, so that they can absorb and hold both air and water. Humus, which is nothing but decaying vegetables and animal matter, keeps soils porous. In decaying, this organic matter also freed the plant foods of which it was originally composed.

Without humus, the soil is not only poorer in plant foods but the other elements in the soil tend to pack down and put the soil in poor till.

Each crop takes materials out of the soil. In order to keep the soil fertile, the supply of both plant foods and humus must be constantly maintained and renewed.

Cotton producing a bale per acre removes 65 pounds of nitrogen, 23 pounds of phosphoric acid and 50 pounds of potash from the soil. When burrs, leaves, and stalks are plowed back, 27 pounds of nitrogen, 7 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 23 pounds of potash are returned to the soil. But this still leaves a net loss of 70 pounds of plant food.

A 80-bushel corn crop takes out 95 pounds of nitrogen, 35 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 70 pounds of potash, a total of 200 pounds of plant food. If the stover is worked back into the soil, about half of this plant food is returned. However, the soil will have lost 57 pounds of nitrogen, 23 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 13 pounds of potash in the grain produced.

Livestock production is thought of as a means of conserving soils, and it is, asserts Mr. Adams, if when a 1,000-pound steer is sold off the farm, it takes along around 27 pounds of nitrogen, 18 pounds of phosphoric acid, and 2 pounds of potash. In like manner, each 100 pounds of milk produced carries off fertility which would require the application of 31 pounds of nitrogen, 15 pounds of superphosphate, and 3.6 pounds of muriate of potash to replace.

Farmers should remember that plant foods they remove from the soil each year. It will pay to determine what plant foods and organic matter should be added to maintain the high level of fertility needed for profitable production of crops and livestock.

GOP Platform Makers Have Headache

By FRANCIS M. LEMAY

Washington, June 10—(AP)—Broad differences among top Republicans in Congress, on issues of domestic and foreign policy, point to a king of the hill headache for GOP platform writers.

This family feuding on Capitol Hill is bound to echo in Philadelphia, where the platform committee will meet a week from today—five days ahead of the opening of the Republican National Convention. GOP presidential aspirants have joined in the scraps.

Taber led the House battle to cut foreign aid appropriations below the figure previously authorized by Congress. Vandenberg, one of the architects of the bi-partisan foreign policy, is crying a vigorous "No!"

Governors Dewey of New York and Warren of California, as well as former Governor Stassen of Minnesota all candidates for the Republican presidential nomination have thrown their influence behind Vandenberg, who also is mentioned as a possible GOP standard-bearer.

Not that Democratic party farm leaders are going to have any picnic themselves—what with the Dixie revolt over President Truman's civil rights program and other differences.

But the Republicans come to bat first.

Moreover, they may have more irritations heaped upon them if Congress returns to work after the GOP convention—as now appears possible. Democrats then would be in a position to call upon the majority party to deliver in Congress every promise made at Philadelphia.

"We won't let that bother us," House Speaker Martin of Massachusetts, a darkhorse contender for the presidential nomination, told a reporter today.

The big question now is whether the party leadership can settle the squabbles over such other active issues on Capitol Hill as:

Foreign Affairs.

This issue pits Republican Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, against Republican representative Taber of New York, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Senator Taft of Ohio, another leading contender for the presidential nomination, has not announced his stand.

As for broad foreign policy declarations, Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, head of the platform writing group, announced today he has asked Rep. Herter of his own state to sit in one of the deliberations. Herter headed a special foreign aid committee which did much of the spadework that led to House acceptance of the European Recovery Program.

The Senate must make up its mind about the later House cuts, and the two bodies must settle their differences before Congress adjourns or recesses next week.

Houston—Senator Taft of Ohio piloted the Taft-Elliender-Wagner housing bill to Senate passage. The bill contemplates construction of 15,000,000 homes in 10 years principally by private enterprise with government encouragement. It also would provide for 100,000 government financed low-rent housing units for small income families.

Republican chairman Wolcott of Michigan of the House Banking Committee, unwilling to accept the measure sponsored by Taft, whipped up a substitute housing bill, "Socialism," said Wolcott of the public housing and slum clearance provisions of the T-E-W bill.

Congress may wind up next week in a slambang battle on the housing issue, with Republican ranks split wide.

Oleomargarine—Although this bread spread is just one item in the nation's food supply, it has caused one of the broadest breaks among Republicans—aligning city Republicans against farm state Republicans.

City Republicans, with large consumer constituencies, want to take the federal tax off oleo. Country Republicans, most of them from important dairy areas, contend such action would do the dairy farmers irreparable damage and endanger the nation's milk supply.

The tax repealer has passed the House and is pending in the Senate.

Long range farm program—There are some signs that the city Republicans and the country Republicans differ on this score, too.

House Republicans have given the green light to a stop-gap bill continuing price supports for farmers, much in the same manner as those devised originally by the New Deal administration. Senate Republicans still are hopeful of passing a long-range program at this session.

Public power—The GOP-controlled House last month turned thumbs down on a proposal to supplement the Tennessee Valley authority's hydroelectric power production capacity with a steam generating plant, yesterday, the GOP-controlled Senate Appropriations Committee, voted in favor of the project.

The Senate has passed a measure to authorize $300,000,000 for this purpose. But it is stuck in the House committee on education and labor.

There are other differences among Republicans, including the advisability of trying to ram through Congress President Truman's anti-lynch, anti-poll tax, anti-job discrimination and anti-Jim Crow civil rights proposals.

They all add up to some interesting, and perhaps trying, days and nights for the GOP platform writers.

Animal life in Arizona's Grand Canyon includes about 180 species of birds, 80 species of mammals, 25 reptiles and 5 amphibians.

The Show Goes On

"Anything for a laugh." That's what people always say about circus clowns. They'll knock themselves silly just to give little boys—and big boys, too—a treat they'll always remember. Take Lulu, for instance. Here she is, performing in New York, giving two boys a thrill that comes once in a lifetime. Lulu's husband was a clown, too. They had worked together for 20 years. His name was Albertino. The two were on the radio the night before this picture was taken. And Albertino fell dead at the microphone. But, with circus clowns, it's anything for a laugh. So Lulu covered her tears with greasepaint, and went on with her act.

Holt Hopes to Gain From Both Factions

Little Rock, June 10 (UP)—Governatorial Candidate Jack Holt hopes to gain from a reported division in the ranks of supporters of two former Arkansas governors, a Little Rock newspaper said today.

After stating that former Gov. Carl E. Bailey is supporting Sid McMath of Hot Springs and that former Gov. Homer M. Adkins is lending "moral support" to the same candidate the paper said:

"Former attorney general Jack Holt, who won races during the administration of both ex-governors, is relying strongly on a cross section of both organizations that elected him to state office three times."

Outlining the divisions in the old organizations, the paper said such "stand-pat" Bailey organization leaders as James L. Bland and Jay Myers of Walnut Ridge, former Sheriff F. F. (Pappy) Kitchens of Phillips county and Sheriff Howard Clayton of Desha county are apparently backing former internal revenue collector Horace Thompson.

On the other hand, the paper said, Dan Felton of Marianna, a member of an Adkins-appointed penitentiary commission, has also joined Thompson as associate manager of his campaign while J. J. Martin of Jonesboro, Adkins' former executive secretary, is attached to the McMath headquarters.

The paper said much of the three-way battle will center in Eastern Arkansas where James (Uncle Mac) MacKrell of Little Rock has been unable to obtain a foothold.

Meanwhile, McMath continued with his plans for opening his campaign in Pine Bluff Saturday night. He will be introduced by W. H. Kennedy, Jr., of Pine Bluff.

Thompson was in Camden and Hampton today after visiting friends at Hope, Stamps, Lewisville and Magnolia yesterday. He will be in Monticello, McGehee and Warren tomorrow. Thompson plans to open his campaign at Morrilton on June 18.

Holt will speak at a dinner meeting of the Y's men's club of Little Rock tomorrow and will attend sessions of the Arkansas Bar Association and American Veterans of World War II tomorrow night at Hot Springs. He will open his campaign at Searcy June 19.

MacKrell will be at Paris tonight, Fort Smith tomorrow and in Cave City and Evening Shade Saturday.

John G. Lonsdale was in Little Rock today. He will speak at Leno and England Saturday.

Some Tips for Both Sexes

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Newsfeatures Writer

New York—Girls, do you get a long with the men in your office? Do they like you?

If you do, and they do, chances are you'll get along well with your husband—and he'll like you.

Men, do you hate washing dishes? If you do—and most of you do—chances are it's because the sink was placed just high enough to be comfortable for the little woman—two inches shorter than you are.

Those are a couple of the diverse observations of Dr. Lillian Moller Gilbreth, a nationally known efficiency expert.

Dr. Gilbreth speaks from experience. She's the mother of 12 children, a homemaker for a big brood—and president of a firm of consulting engineers in management. Incidentally, she thinks that many women—many, not all—can successfully combine a home and a job.

"And anyone who says that women work for pin-money, for excitement or the chance to meet a "One concern had done everything they could to halt mounting absenteeism and dropping employment. They'd cut down waste motion, retrained against fatigue, put in attractive rest rooms—but it kept right on. Then they talked informally with some of the girls.

The problem simply boiled down to the fact that there were no eligible young men employed there—and they couldn't do a thing about it."

It would be nice, she thinks, if people would only budget their time and energy the way people budget their income. She thinks, however, that you have to enjoy the budgeting idea before any such attempts will be successful.

Truman Hints Politics to Warm Up

By ERNEST B. VACCARO

Olympia, Wash., June 10 (AP)—President Truman punctuated his long distance attack on Congress today with a broad hint of a more extended speaking campaign "when things warm up, and we get into politics."

The chief executive joked with a trainee audience at Everett last night about "this bi-partisan, non-political trip of mine."

Upon receiving a rod and reel from the crowd and being invited to enter a Salmon Derby, he said he didn't know whether he would be successful as he didn't know the conditions—but if he did enter he would do "my damndest" just "like I do everything else."

To audience after audience, in train and other appearances, the president suggested the possibility of his return later to discuss the issues of the campaign.

And before audience after audience, he has attacked Congress for failing to go along with his pricing, housing and farm recommendations.

His remark to reporters at Spokane that the present Congress is the worst in his memory—he first said the worst since the first one met—drew immediate response from Republican congressmen. House Republican Leader Halleck of Indiana countered by saying found that it took years to learn. The differences in organs were not uniform.

Some of the Japanese were able to sex 1,400 chicks an hour with an accuracy of 98 per cent. It was years before Americans equalled that record.

Sexor teaching schools were set up in Kent and Bellingham, Wash. Later Dr. Morely Jull, then U.S. Poultry Husbandman at Beltsville Md., took over the training.

Sexors went to Japan for training and returned to set up their own schools.

A slow sexor turns out 100 chicks in 15 minutes. A fast one does 100 in four minutes. The usual pay is one cent a chick. Graduates of the American sexor schools are finding work in the United States, Cuba and Mexico. Most of them are affiliated with employment associations that place sexors.

The "American Scientist" says the sexors have done well. Their earnings have bought them breeding farms and hatcheries.

Telling Sex of Chickens Pays Well

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor

New York—A new business in the United States, telling the sex of day-old chickens, pays from $4 to $12 an hour.

These chick-sexors, as they are called, number only about 1,000 and most of them work only three or four months in a year. In that time a fast sexor will make about $6,000.

The story of this business is told in the "American Scientist" by John H. Lunn of Brookston, Indiana. He points out that until 1933 a n y b o d y who had ever hatched a chick thought you couldn't tell the sex until the cockerel began to make a comb.

But the Japanese found a way to determine the sex of a day-old chick.

In the depression it became necessary to economize in breeding chickens for eggs. It would save money if the males could be killed or separated, and raised to the eating stage.

The discovery applied only to Leghorns. But Leghorns are a large share of the egg business in the United States.

Five Japanese sexors came to America to reveal that the "secret" was just a matter of skill in observing slight differences in shape of small organs. But when Americans first tried the trick, they

"there are a lot of people who think Mr. Truman is the poorest president we have had since George Washington."

Mr. Truman is billed for the third of a series of five major addresses at Seattle at 8:30 p. m. (CST) today in which he is expected to renew his promise of support for advocates of multiple-purpose development of northwestern river basins.

The disastrous Columbia river flood, the effects of which he will view in a plane flight over the area around Portland, Ore., tomorrow, furnished the theme for his talk under the auspices of the Washington State Press Club in Memorial High School Stadium.

He spent last night at the executive mansion as the guest of Gov. Mon C. Wallgren, regarded by some as a possible candidate for the Democratic nomination for vice president.

They stumped the state together last night and again today in a manner reminiscent of their stumping tour together in 1944. Mr. Truman, then a candidate for vice president, spoke in behalf of Wallgren's candidacy for governor four years ago.

At each appearance, the governor introduces the president, Mrs. Truman and the president's daughter, Margaret. Then, the president introduces Mrs. Wallgren, who is also on the tour.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1947
By King Features Syndicate.

New York, June 9. —These dispatches have often called attention to the policy of federal justice administered by the office of the United States attorney, the federal district courts and the federal grand juries and trial juries in New Jersey. The commentators have examined the actions and political background of Edgar L. Rossbach, the U. S. attorney, and Thomas Francis Meaney, one of the district judges. Both are clubmen and have a long record in the underworld. Both are also in two notorious prosecutions of union crooks, Joe Fay and Ben Press. The acquittal of Fay was so flagrant that Attorney General Tom Clark the next morning called it a "damned outrage."

Judge Meaney suffered this particular outrage to unfold without interference and maintained the same judicial attitude through the trial of Rossbach. This notorious crook, the center of a conspiracy case, was acquitted while his two accomplices were convicted. Fay was a powerful racketeer in the same political circle with Rossbach and Meaney. The charge against Fay was evasion of the tax on graft from contractors performing big government jobs. Part of the money went to associate thieves in the same political machine in Jersey City and Newark. The charge against Press was a black-market sale of whiskey obtained from Schenley during the war by means of threats by Press to call strikes against Schenley's liquor factories, warehouses and so forth. The shakedown was proved and the black market sales were traced by the Alcohol Tax Unit of the Treasury.

On May 20, Rossbach said he thought the public official should get out after he had hit the "high spot" of his career. The Fay case was Rossbach's real high spot, but that was about 18 months ago. Apparently Rossbach is a prosecutor before Meaney. Rossbach let one fellow get onto the jury who had formerly been a member of Fay's union and who was now a contractor subject to ruinous reprisals from the union. Two other jurors were members of families within the political circle of the prosecutor, the judge and the crook at bar. The grand jury was typical of the whole thing. Justice in the federal courts in New Jersey under Clark and all his predecessors in the New Deal. Clark sent a man up to Trenton, where the grand jury sat, and Newark, where the "investigation" had occurred, to "investigate" and report to him. The report was a brushoff and never was offered for publication.

Clark tried to forget it, but the situation was so raw and the U. S. attorney and the judges of the Hague mob were so bold that something finally had to give. It got worse by the month. Income tax jobs settled on the Elliott Roosevelt scale of a few cents on the dollar. Bankruptcy jobs. Back market jobs. All kinds of jobs and a point to be remembered is that Meaney and Rossbach are clubmen who have a line on everybody. They know the background and susceptibilities and the hidden nerve centers of most of those who are called to prove on and justify and trial juries and the weaknesses of witnesses. Anything they don't know themselves, they can easily find out through the Hague mob.

Rossbach's job and Meaney's under the circumstances, called for individuals of remarkably fine character. Mr. Clark's explosion accounts for Rossbach. Meaney's moral and ethical qualities were

Gilbert Homers But Team Loses to Mobile

By The Associated Press
Charlie Gilbert slammed his two-run home run in the second inning last night but it was in vain as the Nashville Vols lost to Mobile 13-7, and dropped a full game of their Southern Association lead.

The Vols, however, won the first game of the three-game series, 6-4, and set the pace for a six full games. Birmingham's Barons snapped a seven-game losing string at Little Rock with a 6-2 victory to salvage a point in the game.

The loss dropped Little Rock back into the cellar as New Orleans climbed out of the strength of a 1-1 tie game with the Cardinals. That gave New Orleans a 3-2 edge in the series.

The redoubtable Atlanta Crackers were outthanked at Memphis but won 6-5, to take a 4-1 margin in the series with the Cardinals.

Alex Ronay scattered seven hits among the Travelers while the Barons made the most of the nine they got off Len Perme and Luke Hamman. Patch was out in their series. Tuesday night's game was rained out.

Schoolboy Is Improving With Time

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer
Apparently all that was troubling young Curt Simmons was a case of big league jitters.

On a poor start, the 19-year-old Egypt, Ph. high school graduate who received a record bonus of $80,000 from the Philadelphia Phillies last summer, is beginning to pay dividends on the investment.

The solidly-built southpaw gave the most impressive performance of his brief career last night when he outpitched the great Ewell Blackwell as the Phillies defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 9-2 in Cincinnati.

Simmons was tagged for nine hits, but in only two innings did he allow more than one hit. He struck out nine Redlegs.

The victory, which advanced the Phillies to only two and a half games behind the first place New York Giants in one of the closest races in National League history, was Simmons' third in succession. He now has a record of 1-1 in his first four starts.

Just two weeks ago, Curt boosted only one victory against four setbacks. The St. Louis Cardinals missed an opportunity to take over first place when they suffered an 11-5 setback at the hands of the Boston Braves in a night game in St. Louis. A victory over the Braves would have put the Cards half a game in lead.

The Giants, who started the day with a four percentage point lead, had split a double header with the Cubs in Chicago and lost their four-point lead. So, instead of being in second place, the Giants found themselves in front by half a game when the Cards got whipped.

After presenting the Cubs with five unearned runs in a 7-4 decision in the opener, the Giants came back to win the nightcap 6-1.

Ralph Kiner's three-run homer highlighted a 6-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers as the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Detroit Tigers came from behind twice to hang another defeat upon the neck of today in the 48th U. S. Open Golf championship. The pin-sized Hershey, Pa. star, with the long, straight shaft, was the logical choice to lead the pack when the tournament started Saturday.

Early Wynn registered his sixth victory as the fast-traveling Washington Senators whipped the St. Louis Browns 5-2 in another night game in Washington.

Wynn's victory postponed the 24-year-old pitcher's postgame party in the American League, Chicago at New York and Cleveland at Boston.

The links derby that will decide whether Lew Worsham of Oakmont, Pa., will retain the laurels he reaped a year ago at St. Louis comprised the best in the land plus Bobby Locke of South Africa.

Expected to tread on Hogan's heels were the casual Locke and the boomer from White Sulphur Springs, Va., Samuel Jackson (Snead), Snead won the Los Angeles Open on this course in 1945.

Behind Hogan, Locke and Snead were 25 or more who could fill the specifications of a champion. They included smiling Jimmy Demaret of St. Louis and slim Lloyd Mangrum of Niles, Ill., broad-shouldered Chick Harbert of Northville, Mich., Clayton Heafner of Charlotte, N. C., Herman Harner of White Plains, N. Y., and Claude Harmon of Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Sharp contenders also among the customary 171 ball batters were Stewart "Skip" Alexander of Lexington, N. C., Ed Purjes of Memphis, Mich., Cary Middlecutt of Memphis, Herman Keiser of Akron, O., Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., E. J. "Dutch" Harrison of Chicago, Tony Penna of Chicago, Ed Oliver of Seattle, Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kas. Art Bell, San Francisco; Al Zimmermann, Portland, Ore.; Ellsworth Vines, Iowa City, Ia.; Jim Ferrier, San Francisco; Charles G. Coogdon, Tacoma; and John Balla Phoenix.

Crack amateurs were in there pitching too for glory alone while the pros were striving for a crown worth $2,000 cash and possibly a $150,000 total in future commitments.

The Simon Pures were led by Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., and Robert "Skeet" Riegel of upper Darby, Pa.

Merchants Down Henderson by Lop-Sided Score

Hope's hard shuffling Merchants easily downed a team from Henderson College 20 to 5 at Fair park last night behind the hurling of Ferguson and Taylor.

Mutt Ferguson pitched 3 1/2 innings, allowing a single hit. Roy Taylor went the rest of the way, effectively holding the visitors.

Two hits each were recorded by J. Bell, Bearden and Ferguson. Tonight's league play pits Frigidaires against the VFW in the first game and 164 against the Boosters in the second contest.

Greenville Adds to Lead in Cotton Loop

By the Associated Press

Greenvood added two more games to its Cotton States League lead last night (Wed.), sweeping a twin bill from second-place Hot Springs, 5-1 and 5-4.

El Dorado squeaked by Clarksdale, 7-6, and Greenville took a 16-inning "struggle" from Pine Bluff, 4-3. Helena at Natchez was rained out.

Greenvood took the first end of the double-bill behind the eight-hit hurling of Hazel, Art Hamilton, on the mound for Hot Springs, allowed only five hits, but the Dodgers converted them into runs.

A pinch single by Copeland Goss gave El Dorado victory over Clarksdale. Goss slugged his game-winning hit in the eighth with Officer Howard Roberts roosting on third base.

Three hurlers worked for Clarksdale, giving up a total of 13 hits. Lefty Graham limited Clarksdale to eight.

Feeding Pigs in Pasture Best Way to Cut Cost

Feeding pigs on pasture is the best way to cut the cost of hog production, according to Oliver L. Adams, Hempstead county agent. This practice will reduce protein requirements and also is the most effective method of controlling internal parasites.

Good pastures provide the vitamin A and calcium which are essential for good growth. They are high in protein content and will cut the cost of bought supplements in half. Where no protein supplements are available, hogs can be raised successfully on grain and pasture alone. However, it will take more feed than if a supplement were available.

Feed is scarce and high in price. Make it go farther by pasture feeding, the cheapest method of fattening hogs.

Elderberries Are Unused Wealth

The white blossom clusters of the wild elder bush are now decorating many a wayside and swampy meadow from the Atlantic Coast to the Rockies. These blossoms are forerunners of a wealth of almost blackberries, mild and sweet in flavor, and long-time favorites for pie and preserving. Elderberries are one of America's native fruits which are free for the picking and deserve greater appreciation by thrifty housewives.

The bush is easily cultivated, plant scientists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture say. A few bushes will furnish enough fruit for summer pies and preserving and will add beauty in flower and foliage to the home grounds. The bush flourishes from Florida to Canada and across the Great Plains. The best time for transplanting is in the late fall, but when the best fruit is ripe in summer may be the best time to choose small bushes which bear heavily. After transplanting the bush should be cut back for a good start next spring.

Elderberries are easy to grow, easy to pick, easy to preserve and easy to eat. It takes only a few minutes to harvest a bushel of the fruit clusters and no steepling is required. In addition, to the sweet mild flavor and purplish black color, the berries offer Vitamin C. Farm housewives have long used them to preserve as "pie fruit" and to press for juice. A few commercial companies put up small packs each year. One New York State canner puts up about 30 tons a year; another makes elderberry preserves and butter.

The berries also are excellent to preserve by freezing. Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, reports, "The washed stemmed fruit may be packaged and frozen 'straight,' or may be mixed with sugar and a little flour, and frozen in cartons for pies. Because the berries are so mild in flavor, a little lemon juice is added in pie-making. A combination of rhubarb and elderberry makes an unusual and delicious pie. For a fruit drink, the elderberry juice may be combined with lemon juice or with lemon juice and ginger ale, and sweetened with sugar to taste."

Greeks Are 2355 Years Ahead of U. S.

By JAMES MARLOW
Washington, June 9—(AP)—The Greeks were about 2,355 years ahead of us.

Back in 407 B. C., when things were getting tough, the city state of Athens let the slaves enlist in the army with the purpose of making them citizens.

The U. S. Senate, working on a draft law, has just voted to let 25,000 anti-Communist aliens enlist in the U. S. armed forces with the promise of making them American citizens after five years' service.

History is full of the story of nations hiring aliens to fight for them. Here in the civil war men could escape the draft by hiring substitutes.

Senator Lodge, Massachusetts Republican, offered the alien volunteers idea to the Senate which accepted it, but not without some protest.

Lodge said that every alien—such as anti-Communist Poles and Czechs in Europe—who enlisted, would mean one less American to be drafted.

A soldier hired to fight for a country which is not his own country is called a "mercenary." Lodge said the 25,000 aliens he has in mind should not be called mercenaries.

But Senator Holand, Florida Democrat, said this country just the same would be accused of doing that, hiring mercenaries.

And Senator Gurney, South Dakota Republican, fighting Lodge's idea said:

"Many people feel that such a move would subject our nation to the criticism that our own people are not willing to bear arms in the defense of our country."

During the Civil War in this country, men facing the draft for the Union army could hire substitutes by paying them $300. In the South too, would-be draftees in the Confederate army could hire substitutes.

In their "growth of the American Republic" the historians Morison and Commager have a note on what happened in the North in Civil war days.

"As recruits were credited to the district where they enlisted, and not to that of their residence, several wealthy communities escaped the draft altogether by purchasing cannon-fodder in the poorer country districts."

In short the rich could hire the poor to do their fighting.

Hired alien soldiers have a long history.

In 401 B. C., for instance, Cyrus the Persian hired Xenophon and 10,000 Greeks to fight for him in Persia. When Cyrus was bumped off the Greeks had a terrible time getting back home. And school boys have been having a terrible time for years reading about it in the book which Xenophon wrote—The Anabasis—to tell the story.

Then there were the Carthaginians, when they were fighting Rome in the Western Mediterranean.

The businessmen of Carthage didn't want to fight. They hired outsiders to do it for them.

Carthage finally got its ears knocked off by the Romans and faded out of history.

The Romans themselves while they depended on the citizens of Rome and the empire to do the empire's fighting, were good for centuries.

As the Roman empire started to decay, barbarian mercenaries were hired to do the fighting. That empire, too, went out the window.

In this country, the British brought over 30,000 German mercenaries—the Hessians—to fight us in the Revolutionary war.

Only about 17,000 of them got back home. The rest were killed or settled down here and raised families.

Milk Gives Baby Plenty Calcium

All babies are born calcium-poor because bones must be soft and flexible to survive birth, nutritionists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture explain. The newborn baby has not yet a smaller amount but also a smaller percentage of calcium than the normal, fully developed body.

Once safely born, however, the body needs to catch up rapidly in calcium to develop normally. Milk is rich in calcium to supply this need. In order to grow normally the child must increase the amount and percentage of calcium in his body at the same time that his body weight is increasing rapidly. So his need for calcium is greater than his need for other bodybuilding materials.

Unfortunately, many people remain calcium-poor throughout life for lack of enough calcium in their food. A child's growing body has greater need for calcium than many parents realize, and calcium deficiencies in both children and adults are much more common than many physicians realize because there is no good method of directly detecting them. Studies of American diets show that calcium and riboflavin—one of the B-Vitamins—are the two nutrients that most often fall short.

According to Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, milk is richer in both these nutrients than any other food. Without enough milk, it is difficult or impossible for the average person to get the calcium he needs for adequate nutrition. Whatever other foods must be skimmed in budget meals, families should make sure that growing children get 3 to 4 cups or a nearly full quart of milk each day. Two cups is the minimum for adults.

The daily quota of milk does not have to be taken entirely in liquid form. Part of it can be used in cooking. When evaporated milk and dried milk are cheaper or more convenient than fluid milk, they may be used to advantage, especially in budget meals.

'Rights' Group to Pick Own Candidate

Jackson, Miss., June 9—(AP)—The Southern States' Rights Democrats opened their headquarters here today under the direction of Oliver Emmerich.

Emmerich, McComb, Miss., publisher, was named director by the campaign committee which met here yesterday at the call of Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas.

The committee decided that the Southern States' Rights Democrats will offer their own presidential candidate if the national party nominates President Truman.

The States' Rights plan to hold a conference of their supporters in Birmingham, Ala., on July 17 to choose their own candidate. Mr. Truman wins at Philadelphia after that week.

As campaign director, Emmerich will seek to perfect a field organization to work actively in each state through the proposed Birmingham conference.

"The work of the organization right now is geared through the convention and the possible conference," Emmerich said. "Whether the States' rights organization continues after that will depend on what the Birmingham conference does."

Merritt Gibson of Longview, Texas, former speaker, said States' Rights will caucus at Washington or Philadelphia prior to the convention and formulate "demands" to be made upon the national convention. If these are refused, he said, States' Rights delegates may walk out. The specific character of the "demands" was not disclosed.

"If the convention is not in agreement with certain demands made to it, the delegates will leave it up to the convention whether or not the delegates would be seated," Gibson said. "The delegates would decide at the pre-convention caucus whether they would take their seats."

"If the Birmingham conference is necessary," the Texan declared, "it would not be a third party or a bolt. It would merely suggest a man for president and vice president. The support of those men would be a matter to be left to the individual states."

These suggested candidates would be recommended to the party in each state for support, he declared.

The campaign committee was created here May 10 at a south-wide meeting of States' Rights Democrats. Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas was named permanent chairman of the movement.

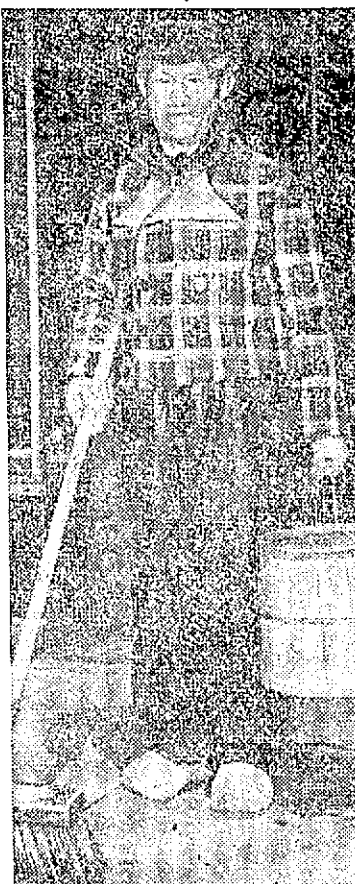

South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Tennessee, Arkansas, and Texas were represented at the campaign committee's meeting.

Amity June 8 —(AP)—A hotel operator died on a street here last night after an unidentified assailant fired three bullets into his body at close range.

He was Oscar Wheeler, about 50, manager of a hotel bearing his name.

Doyle Buck of Amity, who was with Wheeler, said two bullets pierced a sleeve of his shirt. Deputy Sheriff Bert Tolleson quoted Buck as relating that he and Wheeler were walking down a business street of this small south Arkansas town when a man approaching from the opposite direction drew a pistol, fired five shots at close range and fled.

Tolleson said Buck told officers he did not know the man. Bloodhounds were brought here in an effort to track the slayer. Surviving Wheeler are his widow and several brothers and sisters.

Little Rock, June 8 —(AP)—Ira Coleman Roberts, 47, once convicted on a charge of interstate transportation of stolen money, has been arrested on a similar charge. FBI Agent Dean Morley said here.

Roberts was convicted in 1946 in a case involving alleged transportation of $5,325 between Pennington Gap, Va., and Middletown, Ky.

He said Coleman was arrested at Paragould and released on bond of $5,000.

Little Rock, June 9 —(AP)—The University of Arkansas School of Medicine announced today it already had entrance applications from 232 Arkansans for a class of 90 new students.

Dr. Joseph T. Roberts, medical school dean, said the school had received between 2,000 and 3,000 queries from prospective students. He said that the admissions committee had determined that only 232 were bona fide Arkansans.

He said Arkansans would receive preference.

Thirty-one of the 55 graduates of the school this year were out-of-state students but, Dr. Roberts said they were admitted under the wartime training program when one third of the school's capacity was allocated to the army and one third to the navy.

He said the present third year class of 55 includes 21 out of state students assigned by the army and navy. The second year class of 78 has two out of state students and the 80-man first year class has an all Arkansas enrollment.

Little Rock, June 9 (AP)—A "misunderstanding" was reported today in the interpretation of a wage contract between the Kroger Grocery and Baking Co., and the I AFL's Meatcutters Union in Little Rock, Pine Bluff and Texarkana.

P. Williams, international representative of the Amalgamated Meatcutters and Butcher Workers Union, announced yesterday the company and union had contracted for a $6.50 weekly wage increase to $16 for journeyman and $7.50 for head meat cutters for a 46 hour week.

Williams said today Kroger was insisting that the scale was for a 51 hour week while the union interpreted it to mean for a 46 hours. Williams said the matter probably would have to be arbitrated.

Arkadelphia, June 9 —(UP)—A 38-year-old farmer and father of six children faced a first degree murder charge here today, after allegedly confessing that he killed Oscar Wheeler on Amity's main street Monday night.

The 52-year-old Wheeler died near his Amity hotel after being riddled with eight bullets from an automatic 22 caliber rifle.

The murder charge was filed against Dossie Cox by Deputy Prosecutor C. W. Lookadoo after Cox was captured at his home yesterday morning. He offered no resistance.

Cox reportedly told officers that the shooting grew out of alleged relations between Wheeler and Mrs. Cox while he, Cox, was in service.

Doyle Buck, witness to the shooting, said he was talking to Wheeler when Cox appeared and ordered Wheeler to accompany him. When the order was refused Cox began firing, he said.

Wheeler attempted to use Buck as a shield but could not escape the relentless fire. Two of the bullets went through Buck's shirt and one grazed him.

'Freezer Jars' Bring Inquiry About Glass

The new glass "freezer jars" have brought many recent inquiries to the U. S. Department of Agriculture about freezing in glass. The Department has made no special study of the new containers but Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent offers these considerations:

Advantages of glass jars in general are: they are moisture-vapor-proof; can be re-used; need no heat-sealing as paper containers do; and, though food must be thawed somewhat for removal, there is no leakage from the container in thawing.

Disadvantages of glass jars in general are: they are breakable; because they are round they take up more space in freezers than rectangular paper containers; they become frosty on the surface when removed from the freezer so are slippery to handle without tongs.

The new "freezer jars" are more convenient than ordinary glass jars because the sides are straight so that food slips out easily after slight defrosting.

Easy Way to Shell a Boiled Egg

At this season when eggs are still in good supply and many are being hard-cooked for picnics, lunch boxes, summer salads and main dishes for the family, housewives may be interested in a fast and easy shelling method suggested by poultry marketing specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Shell eggs under running water, the specialists advise. As soon as the egg is cooked, cool it immediately under running water to loosen the shell, prevent overcooking and make handling easier. Crack the shell by tapping against a hard edge or with a spoon. Then loosen it by rolling the egg between the hands. Hold the egg under water and begin peeling at the large end where there is an air space under the shell.

The cold water helps ease off the shell and washes away any bits left on the white.

According to Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, prompt cooling in water after cooking has another advantage. It helps prevent the dark ring which sometimes appears around the yolk of a hard-cooked egg. The ring can be prevented entirely by cooking at low temperature, not overcooking and chilling thoroughly afterward.

Stable Flies Sanitation Problem

Stable flies can be readily controlled by proper sanitation, supplemented by spraying with DDT, asserts Oliver L. Adams, Hempstead county agent.

Stable flies resemble houseflies, though they are somewhat darker. They have biting mouthparts and feed on blood. They are most plentiful around barns and straw stacks.

Stable flies breed in wet straw. A stack base is the commonest place for an infestation to develop. To avoid these pests, livestock should be fenced away from straw and hay stacks in spring and summer. After livestock have fed around a stack in the winter, the remainder of the stack should be burned or scattered in the spring. Wet straw and manure around the stack should be scattered also. These sanitary measures will usually prevent stable flies from developing in numbers, even on the farms.

DDT is an efficient insecticide for stable fly control. Both livestock and buildings should be treated.

Sanitation and DDT should be used together. Stable flies are allowed to develop unrestricted. DDT can only give partial protection. On the other hand, it is often difficult to do a perfect job of sanitation. DDT helps finish the job.

Complete directions on stable fly control can be found in leaflet No. 14, "A Fly-Free Barn and Herd," which is available at the county Extension office.

Truman Hurls Challenge to Republicans

Aboard Truman's train enroute to Spokane, Wash., June 9, President Truman today challenged the Republicans to keep Congress in session until price control, housing and farm bills are passed.

He made a slashing attack on the Republican Congressional leadership, mentioning the opposition party for the first time since he left Washington last Thursday on a western tour.

The attack came in an address at Butte, Mont., last night.

The president charged that Congress under Republican domination had wrecked the housing program, virtually abolished the labor department, tried to tear up the employment act of 1946, and the budget and practiced "economy in the pocket."

Congress weakened the Labor Department, Mr. Truman declared, after the Republicans had said in their platform "they were going to make a strong labor department."

The Republican platform, he added, "is the platform of the Congress now."

One of our candidates for president has said the best way to conduct politics was not to buy. Mr. Truman said he did not identify the candidate, but added, "I guess he would let you starve. I don't know. I am not in that class."

The challenge to Congress to stay on the job was put in these words:

"If this Congress goes away without passing an agricultural bill, without passing a housing bill, without doing something about prices, then this Congress has not done anything for the country."

"They should stay there until they get those things done."

The president left immediately after his talk for Washington state.

He will inspect Grand Coulee dam today and top a number of off-the-cuff talks with a major address at Seattle tomorrow.

He will be the guest at Olympia tonight and tomorrow night of Gov. Earl Warren.

Mr. Truman got out of bed at Missoula, Mont., and clad in pajamas and robe, greeted the crowd that met his train.

The Butte High School band set the stage for the president's extemporaneous speech at the crowded high school stadium.

Police Chief Bart Riley said 9,000 persons were inside the auditorium, hundreds outside.

The address followed a four-mile parade from the station before a crowd Riley estimated at 40,000.

Flies Are Common Carrier of Disease

Flies, a nuisance about Hempstead county houses, may spread disease, points out Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent. Development of DDT has made better control of flies possible. Spraying with DDT is not enough to control flies. Sanitation and screening are also necessary.

Sanitation means not letting manure accumulate in piles, and disposal of garbage at least once a week.

Screening is necessary to prevent flies from coming into the house.

DDT will keep a house practically free of flies. Spraying should be done in barns, poultry houses, hog houses, privies, and other outbuildings where flies are common, she states.

If this is done, most flies will be killed before they come to the house and little spraying around the house will be necessary. Spray all screens, the inside walls and ceiling of the back porch, and the outside wall of the back porch around the door may be sufficient.

Full directions for use of DDT in household control are given in Extension leaflet No. 83, "A Fly-Free Home."

Apparently Communist Russia Is Following Teachings of Lenin—May Change Policy

By RELMAN MORIN

AP Foreign Affairs Analyst
(For DeWitt MacKenzie)

Something very like a lull has fallen over the battlefields of the "cold war."

Lenin taught the Communists, in the early days of the movement, that pursuing a policy was something like climbing a mountain.

He said they would encounter obstacles, and often have to change direction. He predicted the necessity to turn and twist, and even to go downhill, before finding a new path and resuming the climb.

The important thing, said Lenin, was to keep the objective in sight. The front is relatively quiet in Europe today.

Nobody is stopping trains or diving on transport airplanes over Berlin. No new government is under pressure. No new names have been added to the Soviet list of "war mongers."

Nobody has been assassinated for quite a while now.

And as you read the transcript of Radio Moscow broadcasts, you are struck by the comparative absence of vitriol and vinegar and sulphuric comment. This silence is almost disquieting.

But it does not mean that the Russians have called off the dogs. It means simply that they have encountered the obstacle on the mountain. And for the moment, they appear to be turning back on the path.

In reality, they are merely looking for the new path, the next opportunity.

An American diplomat who has considerable new and first-hand knowledge of Europe and the Russians believes that the obstacle is what he calls "the will to resist."

It is a result, he says, of many different factors, all flowing, like small streams, into the main river, the collapse of Czechoslovakia, and the dramatization of it in the death of the well-loved Masaryk, was one. The successful rebuild of Finland to Russia was another. The Italian elections and the failure of the Greek guerrillas were others.

And the Marshall Plan—of which this diplomat is an ardent proponent—is still another, in his view.

So he finds the couple of Europe with a "will to resist" today, which they did not have three months ago or certainly six months ago. Russia is now confronted, he says, with a united Western Europe. In some places, this unity has been formalized by political agreements. But even where no formal agreements exist, there is, he believes, a community of purpose, and that purpose is to resist the Communists from within and without.

To be sure, the Red army could nevertheless go right from Berlin to Gibraltar as things stand today.

Russia could win the first round of a major war, but having occupied all of Europe, her problem would be the same problem that faced the Germans, and that they failed to solve. How to control so many millions of people who also had the "will to resist."

What will come next is hard to discern. Russia's first objective must be to weaken that common will, or otherwise to get around it.

For that reason, the supporters of the Marshall Plan are very much worried about the effect, in Europe, of the present battle over proposed reductions in the amount of money authorized. Moscow media was quick to comment on that. It noted the "disappointment in England," and stressed the controversy and confusion that had been aroused elsewhere.

It is obvious that the Russians, blocked for the moment by common sense, are looking for a new route of attack. When they find it, the cold war will get hot again.

Use Several Methods to Preserve Food

The old saying of "Don't put all your eggs in one basket" could easily be applied to food preservation in "Don't preserve all your food by one method."

Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent, tells Hempstead county homemakers.

One of the secrets of having good preserved food is to use the best method for preserving each particular food. Some foods may be better canned, others may be better frozen or stored. The right method will give you a better product.

Preserved food nearest like the fresh product in flavor, texture and food value.

Sometimes the method of food preservation may be determined by the way the food will be served. For instance, if you want to preserve chicken for salad, can it instead of freezing it, she explains.

Often we acquire a taste for a food preserved by one method, although another method may give a better product.

Most fruits give good preserved products whether canned or frozen. Exceptions are strawberries, which are better frozen, and pears,

Can't Launder Rayons Like Cottons

Summer rayons would give greater satisfaction in wear and appearance if women generally would not try to launder them like cottons, textile specialists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture say.

Many women still do not realize that the two fabrics react differently to moisture and heat. Rayons become weaker when wet while cottons are slightly stronger. Therefore, rayons need gentler treatment both in washing and ironing.

Rayons are more easily damaged by heat than cottons so should be pressed with a cooler iron.

Rayons are not difficult to iron; they are just different according to Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent. Usually they do not need to be as moist as cottons for ironing. They should be ironed on the wrong side of the fabric so that any shine left by the iron will not show up on the right side. The iron should follow the weave of the fabric, and the fabric should not be pulled or stretched or given much pressure with the iron.

Above all, the iron should not be too hot. It is a good idea to start ironing with the temperature set low and let the iron become hotter until the ideal heat for the goods is found. Collars, pockets and trimming usually need touching up with the iron on the right side. Use a pressing cloth over the rayon to avoid shining these places.

Rayon crepes and jerseys are the most difficult to iron evenly because they have so much "give."

A point to remember also is that crepes shrink more than plain-woven fabrics.

which are better canned, according to Lorraine Blackwood.

Can or freeze peas, corn, spinach, greens, squash, beets and green beans. Most people like to use both methods. However, if you want can-on-the-cob, freeze it. Corn canned on the cob does not give a high quality product.

Storage is the preferred method for preserving root crops such as turnips, Irish and sweet potatoes. Kraitsing is the best and most common method used for preserving early cabbage, and storage is best for fall cabbage.

Home Canning of Milk Is Possible

Farm families who have more milk than they can use during the summer season, when cows produce the most, often wonder if they cannot preserve surplus milk for future use and write to the U. S. Department of Agriculture to ask about canning it at home.

Dairy specialists of the Department say that home canning of milk is possible, but they do not recommend it because the home-canned product cannot compare with commercially canned milk.

With home-canning equipment the milk cannot be concentrated under vacuum, or homogenized—two processes which make for the superior quality of commercially canned milk.

Home-canned milk is thin says Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, and during storage the fat separates and the milk may develop off-flavors. If correctly canned under pressure, it will keep from spoilage but the family is not likely to find it as appetizing as the commercial product.

Home Building to Be Major Issue

Washington, June 9.—(AP)—A wide open Republican split over housing legislation led Democrats to predict today that home building will be a major issue in the presidential campaign.

Rep. Wolcott of Michigan, Republican chairman of the House Banking committee, wheeled out his own housing bill after crying "socialism" at part of the measure Senator Taft of Ohio pushed through the Senate six weeks ago.

Taft is a major contender for the GOP presidential nomination.

"We are bound to hear about this in the political campaigns," said Rep. McCormack of Massachusetts, Assistant Democratic leader.

Wolcott's bill leaves out whole sections of the Senate measure sponsored jointly by Senators Taft, Ellender (D-La.) and Wagner (D-N.Y.).

These would provide for 500,000 government financed low-rent dwelling units, slum clearance and city redevelopment projects and government-sponsored housing research.

Wolcott aimed his "socialism" charges at the public housing and slum clearance provisions.

"Of course I don't think Senator Taft is a Socialist," the Michigan House members told a news conference at which he outlined his substitute bill.

But Wolcott said he thinks part of the Taft-backed measure "flashions the key by which the house of socialism is opened."

House Democrats, plainly gleeful over the Taft-Wolcott rupture, were quick to throw their support to the Senate-passed bill.

Democratic Leader Rayburn of Texas announced he will join a floor fight to tack the omitted sections of the T-E-W bill onto the house measure.

Wolcott's bill is similar in some respects to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill.

It would, for instance, revive government insurance of new home mortgages, up to 90 per cent of value; provide special loan arrangements for veterans' cooperatives; guarantee annual profits of 3.5 per cent of outstanding investment for big-scale investors in rental housing; encourage multiple dwelling rental housing by special tax treatment, and provide special home loans and grants to paralyzed veterans confined to wheel chairs.

The Banking committee ended a long series of public hearings on housing yesterday. It will meet behind closed doors tomorrow and Friday for the first showdown test on Wolcott's bill.

Vandenberg Lashes at Foreign Policy

By OLIVER W. De WOLFE

Washington, June 9 — (AP) — Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) today called the House cut in foreign aid funds a "cynical reversal" of American foreign policy, done through the "back door" and with "meat axe technique."

He said it is a dangerous one which "gutted the enterprise" of strengthening Europe against communism as "insurance" the United States will not have to fight another great war.

With these words, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee launched a fight to get from Congress the funds he believes are necessary for foreign aid. He spoke there before the Senate Appropriations Committee on the opening of its hearings on the House-passed foreign aid appropriations bill.

What the House did is this: The administration asked $6,533,000,000 for a 12-month program. The House voted 5,980,000,000 and said it had to be spread over 15 months. Secretary of State Marshall has said that would mean cutting European aid from a recovery program to mere relief.

Vandenberg went before the Senate Appropriations Committee sharply as a witness. Seated by his side was Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Senate Democratic leader and a member of the Foreign Relations Committee. Directly across from him was the long committee table was Chairman Bridges (R-NH) of the appropriations group.

Spectators filled the small hearing room to the overflowing. In slow, measured tones, Vandenberg made a prepared statement, which concluded with a statement: "I beg of you—for the sake of the hopes by which free men live—that you give ECA (Economic Cooperation Administration) a fair chance. It is more creation of aid has paid heavy dividends. Ask it for what I profoundly believe to be the national interest of our own United States."

When Vandenberg was testifying, Rep. Taylor (R-N.Y.) got up by a statement saying he has received over a thousand letters and messages about the House cuts and they ran 2-1 in favor of them. Taylor, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, which recommended the cuts, Taber added:

"I will fight to the end to retain this reduction in the bill and resist all the special pressures which are being mustered to make a generous raid on the American taxpayer."

Taber also said the aid bill "has become a test as to whether the American people will support legislation based on facts and constitutional government or whether they want billions of dollars to tax money appropriated by heresy and emotion."

Vandenberg told the Senate Committee it should "give careful consideration" to ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman's views. Hoffman will testify later.

Vandenberg urged the members "to escape from the horrible results" of spreading the program from 12 to 15 months.

Senator Bridges asked if Vandenberg did not believe the committee has the right to make an exhaustive study of the appropriation.

"I most emphatically do," Vandenberg said.

Senator Brooks (R-Ill.) asked if the administration's figures should be changed in the event there has been improvement in Europe's food supply.

Vandenberg said he understands there have been changes in Europe since the ECA authorization was voted, "some for the better, some for the worse."

"I would depend on Hoffman," he repeated.

When Vandenberg concluded, Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) told him: "I think you have served your country very well. I have heard many eloquent statements from you in the past 15 years, but none was more eloquent than the statement you have made today."

Vandenberg said the House cuts in the Economic Cooperation Administration have been variously estimated from one half to two billion dollars. He said the latter figure "is probably closer to the net effect."

How Dress Is Made Governs Cleaning

How well a wash dress washes and irons depends on how it is made as well as on the fabric, Lorraine Blackwood, Home Demonstration Agent, reminds women who are buying or making summer dresses. To stand up to frequent laundering a dress must be sturdily made, yet its seams and other finishes should be flat and lightweight for easy ironing. Look for simple lines, and for strong but not heavily finished seams, for flat fastenings and simple sturdy trim.

Dresses of simple design usually wear and launder best. The fancier the trim and the more intricate the cut, the more time the dress will take on the ironing board.

Washing and ironing are hard on seams. Seams need to be strong but not thick so that it is difficult to get them dry in ironing. Be sure a diagonal or diagonal seam is not cut on the first turn of the hem, then slip-stitch this to the back of the skirt.

Buttons and other fastenings should be washable, lightweight, flat, and if possible small enough to go through the wringer. Pearl covered buttons are good choices. Fabric-covered buttons are likely to rust, and some plastic buttons are not washable.

Dapper Diapers

Irving Zafraan was robbed of his trousers as well as his money by a hold-up man. Luckily, he's a driver for a Chicago diaper service, so he just donned a few diapers so he could modestly call the police.

The depression of the 1930's brought a drastic decline in ministers' salaries.

Advices Use of Hot Water to Wash Hands

"Everyone should form the habit of washing his hands in hot water several times each day," states Home Demonstration Agent Lorraine Blackwood. Hot water is a protective health measure. It is one of the most effective and inexpensive disinfectants.

Thorough washing of the hands before eating is one of the precautions the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis recommends during the epidemic season which is now approaching. Scientific studies show that the hands may spread the virus infection through contamination of food, drinks, or objects carried to the mouth.

For this reason, the National Foundation cautions that a high standard of personal cleanliness should be maintained, and that fresh fruits and vegetables should be washed well before they are eaten.

Farm people have a high percentage of minor and many times major cuts on the skin. These are potential doors of infection. Cuts should be cleaned at once to avoid infection. People make mistakes by using household remedies, such as salves, turpentine, soda, molasses and coal oil, without remembering to clean the wound first. This is particularly true in the case of burns. Hot water and soap have a definite antiseptic value. Cleanliness is the first step in avoiding infection. Hot water and plenty of it should be available in every farm home.

When sickness strikes a home and the doctor is called, he usually needs hot water, she explains. Many times, he recommends a hot water bottle to ease pain or relax strained or sprained muscles. He needs it in a hurry so it should be available.

Ancient people recognized the medicinal value of hot water and used it extensively. Nothing can contribute more to home sanitation than an adequate supply of hot water, states Lorraine Blackwood.

Choose Your Travel Clothes Carefully

Clothes can do so much to make or mar a vacation that it pays to choose a travel wardrobe with great care, says Lorraine Blackwood, home demonstration agent. Choose right and you can "travel light" yet be well and comfortably dressed with the minimum of washing and ironing, Mrs. Blackwood says.

The mainstay of a travel wardrobe is usually a suit, preferably of dark or mixed colors which do not show soil easily. Faille is a good suit fabric because it resists wrinkles—rayon faille, or for cool weather wool faille. For hot weather seersucker has the advantage of being cool, crease resistant, dry quickly after washing and need no pressing.

For children cotton knitwear is comfortable, easily washed, needs no ironing.

For semi-dressy wear consider a silk or rayon print. Prints show soil and wrinkles less than plain colors. Nylon slips are recommended because they do not wrinkle, dry quickly after washing and need no pressing.

Even though frills are prominent in fashions this year, frilly styles are poor choices for travel because they wrinkle easily, take extra space in luggage, need so much pressing.

As for hats, usually a travel problem, Mrs. Blackwood recommends packable hats—hats which open out flat and can be made of fabric to match dresses or flat berets. No cumbersome hat boxes are needed to carry these hats.

Luggage need not be overloaded with shoes if clothes are planned with care. Do not carry too many colors in footwear. One "must" for every traveler, however, is one pair of really comfortable shoes.

Finally, Mrs. Blackwood advises, packing clothes with tissue paper between all folds to prevent creases and save pressing.

Palestine Umpire

Count Folke Bernadotte is the UN's choice to attempt to mediate the Palestine war. The Swedish noble, 53-year-old nephew of King Gustav, acted as intermediary between Heinrich Himmler and the allies in the closing days of World War II. He was the selection of the five great powers for the Holy Land job.

Meter Cheats Blind Man

Butte, Mont. — (AP) — Frank Ericson, blind news vendor, says he's sick of competing with a parking meter. The meter is located near Ericson's newsstand and it has the advantage in that it never has to leave the spot for a sandwich or a snooze. Ericson says his ears have told him on more than one occasion that someone averted his eyes from the meter, then dropped the nickel into the meter, instead of into the collection box.

Tea Privilege

In certain barracks of the British army, one of the privileges granted to soldiers is permission to entertain their relatives at tea in the canteen.

Hopes to Bring Russia Into German Pact

By GLEN WILLIAMS

London, June 9 — (AP) — Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told the House of Commons today Britain still hopes to bring Russia into the four-power agreement on the future of Germany.

Bevin said Britain has approved recommendations for a federal government in Western Germany, western power occupation for an indefinite period, and international control of the industrial Ruhr valley.

The recommendations were put forward by a conference among the United States, Britain, France and the Benelux countries—Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. The recommendations were made public Monday.

A Moscow radio commentator charged today that the recommendations meant the West was converting Western Germany into "a permanent Anglo-American military base," in Berlin Russians and Communists urged the Germans to resist the plan, saying "they're taking away the Ruhr."

Earlier, official British sources said they expected a three-power agreement soon opening the way for the United States, Britain and France to resume allocating war preparations to Russia from Western Germany.

Bevin said acceptance of the six-nation recommendations "does not mean that we have even now abandoned hope of a four-power agreement."

"We are still in favor of economic and political unity of Germany, but that must be established on proper principles," the foreign secretary said.

Russia, meanwhile, apparently is preparing an economic counter-offensive in Europe with something in the shape of a Marshall Plan of her own. This was indicated in a Moscow dispatch quoting the Russian press as saying the Soviet Union is ready to grant increased economic aid to countries friendly to the Russians.

Bevin, in his talk to the House, referred to differences between Russia and the west and added that "we must go on with our program without interruption." He said that when the western powers drop their program for Germany, "we had regard to security."

"The world suffered two terrible wars as a result of German policy and we have made provision against a recurrence," he said.

"We invite the Germans to work out the development of Democratic political institutions."

and we have made provision against a recurrence," he said. "We invite the Germans to work out the development of Democratic political institutions."

No allocations to Russia of dismantled war plants — of which she gets 25 percent under the Potsdam agreement — have been made from the three western zones since mid 1946.

The French and British have continued deliveries under allocations made before that time, but the United States has made none since last December, when the Big Four foreign ministers' London Conference on Germany and Austria collapsed.

"We are still in favor of economic and political unity of Germany, but that must be established on proper principles," the foreign secretary said.
